President's Point of View

When do you 'Sharpen the Saw'? And when do you need to 'Buy a New Saw'?

Mark discusses how to deal with obsolete skills and staying relevant within the Systems Engineering profession. Systems Engineers find that their skill sets must be adaptive, change rapidly, and require constant updating in order to stay current in today's continuously changing technology.

Volunteers Needed: Maryland FIRST LEGO League

Volunteers Needed

Team of volunteers needed to help with judging middle-school events

Great opportunity to share in experiences and inspire our young folks.

To greatly aid our chapter's efforts in promoting engineering education for youth, we are seeking interested people to help us partner with the FIRST LEGO League this spring. One of our chapter members is on the Maryland FIRST LEGO League Planning Committee and has asked if INCOSE could field a team of volunteers to help judge their middle-school events. The FIRST LEGO League is a great opportunity to share in experiences and inspire our young folks.

If this interest you, please respond to programs@incose-cc.org or fill out the form on our website.

UMBC Training Centers has teamed with SE Scholar and developed a unique approach to teaching the INCOSE SE Handbook. The new method contextualizes the Organizational, Project and Technical processes necessary to realize a "System-of-Interest", and with the aid of a comprehensive Process Flow diagram, our Instructor walks the students from the Project Portfolio Process through to the Disposal Process in a logical and sequential manner.

Did you miss out last month?

Systems Engineering Evidence in Commercial Kitchens

Jim Armstrong, ESEP, takes us on a visit to the kitchen at the Inn at Little Washington in order to discuss how and why it was so different from other commercial kitchens. The resulting analysis of how systems engineering has significant relationship to the design of a wide variety of commercial kitchens is provided in this presentation.
